Sample Essay: Work from home versus work at the office

The lockdown imposed due to the pandemic has badly affected the working patterns of the people. Due to restrictions and social distancing, only a limited number of people or employees are allowed to work at the office, and the remaining staff work from home. Technological advancements, fast-speed internet and new software for remote monitoring and effective communication have made working for home possible. An increasing number of people have started working remotely.

Many people think that working from home is beneficial in terms of saving time. People don't have to commute daily for hours. On the contrary, many people think that working at an office is more efficient as it provides you a specific environment which helps you to concentrate and remain focused on your work as compared to home where there are numerous distracting factors which declines the work efficacy.

Working from the office is advantageous due to traditional working, better scrutiny and fewer interruptions. Moreover, it keeps a person active as compared to people who prefer working from home. Although, at home, the luxury of having a comfortable room and quiet place is a blessing for many people, yet most people cannot work in such a sluggish and comfortable environment.

Working in the office provides different opportunities to collaborate and communicate with peers and other employees. In contrast, working from home can isolate a person and there are limited opportunities for socialization because all communication happens through digital resources. Hence, collaboration with the coworkers and supervisors in the office, relative discussion on social and work-related issues is only possible when a person is working in the office. Therefore, remote working can become distressing and causes frustration as there is no motivating factor or emotional support.

Working from home has many beneficial aspects as well such as it is more conformable and allows the employees to save a great deal of money and time. Less traveling by the people leads to less traffic congestion and lesser pollution which is beneficial for the environment. Another important aspect is the people working from home are well-rested and less lethargic which is important for better output. However, if you still feel confused and do not know where to start you can seek help from the professionals at online essay writing service website as this will liberate you from the anxiety of having to write a perfect essay.

When a person works from home, it becomes easy to strike a work-life balance which is important for mental and physical health. As compared to working in an office, companies can benefit more from the employees working remotely by saving the infrastructure cost and miscellaneous expenses to maintain the work space for employees.

In conclusion, some people think that working from home offers flexibility in terms of time while many people favor the idea of working in the office as they believe that the office working environment is more suitable for enhancing efficiency and social communication.
